

HUN

Obedience and subjection were never enjoined by God to humour the passions, lusts, and vanities of those who are commanded to obey our governors. Swift.

You humour me, when I am sick; Pope.

Why not when I am splenetic? Pope.

Children are fond of something which strikes their fancy most, and sullen and regardless of every thing else, if they are not humoured in that fancy. Watts's Logic.

2. To fit; to comply with.

To after age thou shalt be writ the man,
That with smooth air couldst humour best our tongue. Milt.

'Tis my part to invent, and the musicians to humour that invention. Dryden's Preface to Albion.

Fountainbleau is situated among rocks and woods, that give a fine variety of savage prospects: the king has humoured the genius of the place, and only made use of so much art as is necessary to regulate nature. Addison's Guardian.

HUMP. n. f. [corrupted perhaps from bump. See BUMP.] The protuberance formed by a crooked back.

These defects were mended by succeeding matches; the eyes were opened in the next generation, and the bump fell. Tatler, No. 74.

HUMPHBACK. n. f. [bump and back.] Crooked back; high shoulders.

The chief of the family was born with an humphback and very high nose. Tatler.

HUMPHACKED. adj. Having a crooked back.

To HUNCH. v. a. [hunch, German.]

1. To strike or punch with the fists.

Jack's friends began to hunch and push one another: why don't you go and cut the poor fellow down? Arbutnot.

2. [Hucker, a crooked back, German.] To crook the back.

Thy crooked mind within hunch'd out thy back,
And wander'd in thy limbs: to thy own kind
Make love, if thou canst find it in the world. Dryden.

HUNCHBACKED. adj. [hunch and back.] Having a crooked back.

His person deformed to the highest degree, flat-nosed, and hunchbacked. L'Estrange.

But I more fear Creon!

To take that hunchback'd monster in my arms,
Th' excrecence of a man. Dryd. and Lee's Oedipus.

The second daughter was peevish, haggard, pale, with fauceryes, a sharp nose, and hunchbacked. Arbutnot. Hist. of J. Bull.

HUNDRED. adj. [humb, humbet, Saxon; benderd, Dutch.] The number consisting of ten multiplied by ten.

A bafe, proud, three futed, hundred pound, filthy, worsted flocking knave. Shakespeare's King Lear.

A hundred altars in her temple smoke,
A thousand bleeding hearts her pow'r invoke. Dryd. Æn.

Many thousands had seen the transactions of our Saviour, and many hundred thousands received an account of them from the mouths of those who were eye-witnesses. Addison.

1. A company or body consisting of an hundred.

Very few will take this proposition, that God is pleased with the doing of what he himself commands, for an innate moral principle: whoever does so, will have reason to think hundreds of propositions innate. Locke.

Lands, taken from the enemy, were divided into centuries or hundreds, and distributed amongst the soldiers. Arbutnot.

2. A canton or division of a county, perhaps once containing an hundred manors. [Hundredum, low Latin; hundredede, old French.]

Imposits upon merchants do seldom good to the king's revenue; for that that he wins in the hundred, he loseth in the shire. Bacon.

For justice they had a bench under a tree, where Ket usually sat, and with him two of every hundred whence their companies had been raised: here complaints were exhibited. Hayw.

HUNDREDDTH. adj. [hundredscentopop, Saxon.] The ordinal of an hundred; the tenth ten times told.

We shall not need to use the hundredth part of that time, which themselves bestow in making invectives. Hooker.

If this medium is rarer within the sun's body than at its surface, and rarer there than at the hundredth part of an inch from its body, and rarer there than at the orb of Saturn, I see no reason why the increase of density should stop any where. Newton's Opt.

HUNG. The preterite and part. pass. of hang.

A wife so hung with virtues, such a freight,
What mortal shoulders can support! Dryden's Juvenal.

A room that is richly adorned, and hung round with a great variety of pictures, strikes the eye at once. Watts.

HUNGER. n. f. [hunger, Saxon; honger, Dutch.]

1. Desire of food; the pain felt from fasting.

An uneasy sensation at the stomach for food. When the stomach is empty, and the fibres in their natural tension, they draw up so close as to rub against each other, so as to make that sensation: but when they are distended with food, it is again removed; unless when a person fasteth so long as for want of spirits, or nervous fluid, to have those fibres grow too flaccid to corrugate, and then we say a person has fasted away his stomach; and this is occasioned by the attrition of the coats of the stomach against each other.

Thou shalt serve thine enemies in hunger and in thirst. Deutr. xxviii. 48.

The sub-acid part of the animal spirits, being cast off by the lower nerves upon the coats of the stomach, vellicates the fibres, and thereby produces the sense we call hunger. Grew.

Something viscous, fat and oily, remaining in the stomach, destroys the sensation of hunger. Arbutnot on Aliments.

2. Any violent desire.

The immaterial felicities we expect, do naturally suggest the necessity of preparing our appetites and hungers for them, without which heaven can be no heaven to us. Decay of Piety.

To HUNGER. v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To feel the pain of hunger.

Widely they gape, and to the eye they roar,
As if they hungred for the food they bore. Cowley.

2. To desire with great eagerness.

Do'st thou so hunger for my empty chair,
That thou wilt needs invent thee with my honours,
Before thy hour be ripe? O, foolish youth,
Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee!
Stay but a little. Shakespeare's Henry IV. p. ii.

My more having, would be as a fauce
To make me hunger more. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

I content me,
And from the sting of famine fear no harm,
Nor mind it, fed with better thoughts that feed
Me hungring more to do my father's will. Milton's P. Lof.

HUNGERBIT. adj. [hunger and bit.] Pained or weak.

HUNGERBITTEN. adj. ended with hunger.

His strength shall be hungerbitten, and destruction shall be ready at his side. Job xviii. 12.

Thyself
Bred up in poverty and straits at home;
Lost in a desert here, and hungerbit. Milton's Parad. Reg.

HUNGERLY. adj. [from hunger.] Hungry; in want of nourishment.

His beard
Grew thin and hungerly, and seem'd to ake
His lips as he was drinking. Shakef. Taming of the Shrew.

HUNGERLY. adv. With keen appetite.

You have sav'd my longings, and I feed
Most hungring on your sight. Shak. Timon of Alen.

They are all but stomachs, and we all but food;
They eat us hungerly, and, when they're full,
They belch us. Shakespeare's Othello.

HUNGERSTARVED. adj. [hunger and starved.] Starved with hunger; pinched by want of food.

All my followers to th' eager foe
Turn back, and fly like ships before the wind,
Or lambs pursu'd by hungerstarved wolves. Shakef. H. VI.

O'erake me, if thou canst; I scorn thy strength:
Go, go, cheer up thy hungerstarved men. Shakef. H. VI.

As to some holy house th' afflicted came,
Th' hungerstarv'd, the naked, and the lame,
Want and diseases, fled before her name. Dryden.

HUNGRY. adj. [from hunger.] Pinched by want of food.

Odours do in a small degree nourish, and we see men an hungred love to smell hot bread. Bacon's Natural History.

HUNGRILY. adv. [from hunger.] With keen appetite.

Thus much to the kind rural gods we owe,
Who pity'd suff'ring mortals long ago;
When on harsh acorns hungrily they fed,
And gave 'em nicer palates, better bread. Dryden's Juven.

HUNGRY. adj. [from hunger.]

1. Feeling pain from want of food.

That face of his hungry cannibals
Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood. Shakespeare's Henry VI. p. iii.

They that talk thus may say that a man is always hungry, but that he does not always feel it; whereas hunger consists in that very sensation. Locke.

2. Not fat; not fruitful; not prolific; more disposed to draw from other substances than to impart to them.

Cassius has a lean and hungry look. Shakef. Jul. Cesar.

The more fat water will bear soap best; for the hungry water doth kill its unctuous nature. Bacon's Natural History.

In rusty grounds springs are found at the first and second spit, and sometimes lower in a hungry gravel. Mortimer.

To this great day of retribution our Saviour refers us, for reaping the fruits that we here sow in the moist hungry and barren soil. Smalridge's Sermon.

HUNKS. n. f. [hanskur, fordid, Islandick.] A covetous fordid wretch; a miser; a curmudgeon.

The old hunks was well served, to be tricked out of a whole hog for the securing of his puddings. L'Estrange.

She has a husband, a jealous, covetous, old hunk. Dryden.

Trus has given all the intimations of being a close hunk, worth money. Addison's Spectator.

HUN

To HUNT. v. a. [punzian, Saxon, from hune, a dog.]

1. To chase wild animals.

The man that once did sell the lion's skin,
While the beast liv'd, was kill'd in hunting him. Shak. H. V.

Wilt thou hunt the prey for the lion, or fill the appetite of the young lions? Job xxxviii. 39.

We should single every criminal out of the herd, and hunt him down, however formidable and overgrown; and, on the contrary, shelter and defend virtue. Addison's Spectator.

2. To pursue; to follow close.

Evil shall hunt the violent man to overthrow him. Pf. cxi.

The heart strikes five hundred fort of pulses in an hour, and is hunted unto such continual palpitations, through anxiety, that faint would it break. Harvey on Consumptions.

3. To search for.

Not certainly affirming any thing, but by conferring of times and monuments, I do hunt out a probability. Spenser.

All that is found in books is not rightly deduced from the principles it is pretended to be built upon: such an examen every reader's mind is not forward to make, especially in those who have given themselves up to a party, and only hunt for what may favour and support the tenets of it. Locke.

4. To direct or manage hounds in the chase.

He hunts a pack of dogs better than any, and is famous for finding hares. Addison's Spectator.

To HUNT. v. n.

1. To follow the chase.

When he returns from hunting,
I will not speak with him. Shakespeare's King Lear.

Esau went to the field to hunt for venison. Gen. xxvii. 5.

One followed study and knowledge, and another hawking and hunting. Locke.

On the old pagan tombs masks, hunting matches, and Bacchanals are very common. Addison on Italy.

2. To pursue or search.

Very much of kin to this is the hunting after arguments to make good one side of a question, and wholly to neglect and refuse those which favour the other side. Locke.

HUNT. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. A pack of hounds.

The common hunt, though from their rage restrain'd
By sov'reign pow'r, her company disdain'd,
Grinn'd as they pass'd. Dryden's Hind and Panther.

2. A chase.

The hunt is up, the morn is bright and gray;
The fields are fragrant, and the woods are green. Shakef.

3. Pursuit.

I've heard myself proclaim'd;
And by the happy hollow of a tree,
Escap'd the hunt. Shakespeare's King Lear.

HUNTER. n. f. [from hunt.]

1. One who chases animals for pastime.

If those English lords had been good hunters, and reduced the mountains, boggs, and woods within the limits of forests, chaces and parks, the forest law would have driven them into the plains. Davies on Ireland.

Down from a hill the beast that reigns in woods,
First hunter then, pursu'd a gentle brace,
Goodliest of all the forest, hart and hind. Milt. Par. Lof.

Another's crimes th' unhappy hunter bore,
Glutting his father's eyes with guileless gore. Dryden's Æn.

This was the arms or device of our old Roman hunters; a passage of Manilius lets us know the pagan hunters had Meleager for their patron. Addison on Italy.

Bold Nimrod first the savage chase began,
A mighty hunter, and his game was man. Pope.

2. A dog that scents game or beasts of prey.

Of dogs, the valu'd file
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The housekeeper, the hunter. Shakef. Macbeth.

HUNTINGHORN. n. f. [hunting and horn.] A bugle; a horn used to cheer the hounds.

Whist a boy, Jack ran from school,
Fond of his huntinghorn and pole. Prior.

HUNTRESS. n. f. [from hunter.] A woman that follows the chase.

And thou thrice crowned queen of night, survey
With thy chaste eyes, from thy pale sphere above,
Thy huntress' name, that my full life doth sway. Shakef.

Shall I call
Antiquity from the old schools of Greece,
To testify the arms of chastity?
Hence had the huntress Dian her dread bow,
Fair silver-shafted queen, for ever chaste.
Let old Arcadia boast her ample plain,
Th' immortal huntress, and her virgin train;
Nor envy Windsor. Pope's Windsor Forest.

Homer represents Diana with her quiver at her shoulder; but at the same time he describes her as an huntress. Broom.

HUNTSMAN. n. f. [hunt and man.]

1. One who delights in the chase.

Like as a huntsman, after weary chase,

HUR

Seeing the game escape from him away,
Sits down to rest him. Spenser's Sonnets.

Such game, whilst yet the world was new,
The mighty Nimrod did pursue:
What huntsman of our feeble race,
Or dogs, dare such a monster chase? Waller.

2. The servant whose office it is to manage the chase.

Apply this moral rather to the huntsman, that managed the chase, than to the master. L'Estrange's Fables.

HUNTSMANSHIP. n. f. [from huntsman.] The qualifications of a hunter.

At court your fellows every day
Give th' art of rhiming, huntsmanship, or play. Donne.

HURDLE. n. f. [hynbel, Saxon.] A texture of sticks woven together; a crate.

Settle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next,
Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither. Shakespeare.

The blacksmith was hanged, drawn, and quartered at Tyburn; taking pleasure upon the hurdle, to think that he should be famous in after times. Bacon's Henry VII.

The sled, the tumbrel, hurdles and the flail,
These all must be prepar'd. Dryden's Georg.

HURDS. n. f. The refuse of hemp or flax. Ainsworth.

To HURL. v. a. [from hurle, to throw down, Islandick; or, according to Skinner, from whirl.]

1. To throw with violence; to drive impetuously.

If heav'n's have any grievous plagues in store,
O, let them keep it 'till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indignation
On thee. Shakespeare's Richard III.

He holds vengeance in his hand,
To hurl upon their heads that break his law. Shak. R. III.

I with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground,
To hurl at the beholders of my shame. Shakef. Henry VI.

If he thrust him of hatred, or hurl at him by laying of wait. Num. xxxv. 20.

They use both the right hand and the left in hurling stones. Chron. xii. 2.

Hurl ink and wit,
As madmen stones. Ben. Johnson.

His darling fons,
Hurl'd headlong to partake with us, shall curse
Their frail original and faded bliss. Milton's Parad. Lof.

She strikes the lute; but if it found,
Threatens to hurl it on the ground. Waller.

Corrupted light of knowledge hurl'd
Sin, death, and ignorance o'er all the world. Denham.

Young Phaeton,
From East to North irregularly hurl'd,
First set himself on fire, and then the world. Dryd. Juven.

Conjure him far to drive the Grecian train,
And hurl them headlong to their fleet and main. Pope's Iliad.

2. To utter with vehemence. [Hurler, French, to make an howling or hideous noise.]

The glad merchant that does view
His ship far come from watry wilderness,
He hurls out vows. Spenser.

Highly they rag'd against the Higheft,
Hurling defiance toward the vault of heav'n. Milton.

3. To play at a kind of game.

Hurling taketh its denomination from throwing of the ball, and is of two sorts; to goals, and to the country: for hurling to goals there are fifteen or thirty players, more or less, chosen out on each side, who strip themselves, and then join hands in ranks, one against another: out of these ranks they match themselves by pairs, one embracing another, and so pass away; every of which couple are to watch one another during this play. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.

HURL. n. f. [from the verb.] Tumult; riot; commotion.

He in the same hurl murdering such as he thought would withstand his desire, was chosen king. Knolles.

HURLBAT. n. f. [hurl and bat.] Whirlbat. Ainsworth.

HURLER. n. f. [from hurl.] One that plays at hurling.

The hurlers must hurl man to man, and not two set upon one man at once. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.

HURLWIND. n. f. [hurl and wind.] A whirlwind; a violent gust. A word not in use.

Like scatter'd down by howling Eurus blown,
By rapid hurlwinds from his mansion thrown. Sandys.

HURLY. n. f. [I have been told that this word owes its origin to two neighbouring families named Hurly and Burly, or Hurleigh and Burleigh, which filled their part of the kingdom with contests and violence. If this account be rejected, the word must be derived from hurl, hurly, and burly, a ludicrous reduplication. Hurlade, French; hurlubrus, inconsiderately.] Tumult; commotion; bustle.

Winds take the ruffian billows by the top,
That with the hurly death itself awakes. Shakef. H. IV.

Poor discontented,
Which gape and rub the elbow at the news
Of hurlyburly innovation. Shakef. Henry IV. p. i.
